Halal certification is a system to confirm and certify with objective evidence that a product or service does not contain anything that is forbidden in Islam (i.e., something that is haram), and indicates that the product can be used by Muslims with peace of mind.

The acquisition of halal certification is part of our efforts to strengthen sales in the Asian region and expand sales channels for domestic dairy products, and is intended to promote the export of halal products to Southeast Asian countries as raw materials used in products for the halal market.

These products have been audited by the NPO Japan Halal Association (JHAS) based on the JHAS certification standards (in which inspectors check each product and the raw material manufacturing process, packaging materials used, and internal management methods) and have been certified as halal following confirmation that requirements to be halal were being met.
